How to Upsell Training Clients on Meal Plans
and Attract Nutrition-Only Clients

How to Upsell Training Clients, Attract Nutrition-Only Clients, Land Corporate Contracts, and Scale Acquisition Across Multiple Locations

Who This Is For

You run a gym, studio, or multi-location fitness business. You have a team of nutrition coaches — or you are building one. Your goal is not to acquire your first 10 nutrition clients. It is to build a systematic acquisition engine that feeds your nutrition program with qualified clients at every level: individual upsells, nutrition-only leads, corporate wellness contracts, and B2B partnerships.

This playbook gives you the complete system — from the individual training-to-nutrition upsell all the way through corporate contract negotiations and multi-location acquisition strategies. It covers the revenue math, positioning, sales conversations, a 30-day action plan for your team, and advanced acquisition channels that only work at enterprise scale.

If you are a solo trainer, start with Section 3. If you are managing a team, read the whole thing and assign sections to the right people.

Section 1: Why Add Nutrition Services

The Revenue Math That Changes Everything

Most trainers earn exclusively from session fees. The problem: session fees are capped by your available hours. You can only train so many people per day. Nutrition services break that ceiling because meal plan delivery is not time-bound the same way a training session is.

Let's run the numbers.

Training-only model:

- ☐ 20 clients at 2 sessions/week = 40 sessions/week
- ☐ Average session rate: $80
- ☐ Monthly revenue: 40 sessions x 4.3 weeks x $80 = $13,760/month
- ☐ Time required: 40 hours of sessions + 10 hours of programming and admin = 50 hours/week

Training + nutrition model:

- ☐ 20 clients at 2 sessions/week + meal plans for 15 of them = same 40 sessions + 15 meal plans
- ☐ Average session rate: $80
- ☐ Meal plan add-on: $75/month per client
- ☐ Monthly revenue: $13,760 (training) + $1,125 (nutrition) = $14,885/month
- ☐ Additional time: 3-5 hours/week using EvoFit Meals to generate and customize plans

That's $1,125/month in additional revenue for roughly 4 extra hours of work per week. That's $281/hour for the nutrition work — significantly higher than your per-session training rate.

Now extend the model. Add 10 nutrition-only clients who don't train with you:

Nutrition-only clients:

- ☐ 10 clients at $150/month (meal plan + monthly check-in) = $1,500/month
- ☐ Additional time: 5-7 hours/week

Combined total: $13,760 + $1,125 + $1,500 = $16,385/month

You have added $2,625/month with roughly 10 extra hours of work per week. And here is the kicker: those nutrition-only clients often convert to full training clients within 3-6 months once they see results and want to level up.

The Enterprise Revenue Model

Now scale to a team. Five coaches, each managing 20 nutrition clients at $150/month average:

Team-based nutrition program:

- ☐ 5 coaches x 20 clients = 100 nutrition clients
- ☐ Average revenue per client: $150/month
- ☐ Total nutrition MRR: $15,000/month = $180,000/year

Section 2: Positioning Your Nutrition Offering

Choose Your Lane

Before you sell anything, decide what kind of nutrition service you are offering. There are four common models:

Model 1: Meal Plan Delivery (Simplest)

You create customized meal plans tailored to the client's goals, preferences, and restrictions. They receive a weekly or bi-weekly plan with recipes, macros, and a shopping list. No ongoing coaching — just the plan.

- [ ] Best for: Trainers who want to add revenue with minimal time investment
- [ ] Pricing range: $50-100/month
- [ ] Time per client: 30-45 minutes/month after initial setup
- [ ] EvoFit Meals makes this model extremely efficient — you can generate a complete plan in minutes and customize from there

Model 2: Meal Plans + Monthly Check-In

Same as Model 1, but you add a 30-minute monthly nutrition check-in (video call or in-person). You review adherence, adjust the plan based on progress, and troubleshoot barriers.

- [ ] Best for: Trainers who want deeper client relationships and higher pricing
- [ ] Pricing range: $100-200/month
- [ ] Time per client: 60-90 minutes/month
- [ ] Higher retention because clients feel supported

Model 3: Full Nutrition Coaching

Weekly or bi-weekly coaching touchpoints, meal plans, food diary review, habit tracking, and accountability messaging. This is a comprehensive nutrition coaching program.

- [ ] Best for: Trainers with nutrition certifications who want to build a coaching practice
- [ ] Pricing range: $200-400/month
- [ ] Time per client: 2-3 hours/month
- [ ] Requires stronger nutrition knowledge and communication skills

Model 4: Training + Nutrition Bundle (Highest Value)

Your training sessions include integrated nutrition guidance. Clients get both their workout program and their meal plan from you, with everything coordinated.

- [ ] Best for: Trainers who want to maximize per-client revenue
- [ ] Pricing range: Training rate + $75-150/month nutrition add-on
- [ ] This is the model most clients actually want — they just need you to offer it

Recommendation for Enterprise tier: Offer all four models simultaneously. Model 1 is

Section 3: The Training-to-Nutrition Upsell

Why Your Existing Clients Are Your Best First Customers

You already have trust. You already have context on their goals, their schedule, and their struggles. And you almost certainly have clients who are training hard but not eating to support their goals.

The upsell conversation is the fastest path to your first nutrition clients.

The Natural Transition

Don't create a separate sales event. Integrate the nutrition conversation into your existing coaching.

Trigger moments — when to bring it up:

- ☐ 1. When they plateau. "You've been crushing the training side. I think the next unlock for you is dialling in your nutrition. Can I show you what I mean?"
- ☐ 2. When they ask about food. This happens constantly. Instead of giving a casual answer, upgrade the conversation: "Actually, I've started offering customized meal plans for my training clients. Want me to walk you through what that looks like?"
- ☐ 3. When they hit a milestone. "You've made incredible progress. If you want to accelerate from here, the biggest lever we haven't pulled is nutrition. I can build you a plan that matches exactly what we're doing in training."
- ☐ 4. During a check-in or progress review. "Looking at your numbers, your training consistency is excellent. The gap between where you are and where you want to be is almost entirely nutrition. Here's what I'd recommend."
- ☐ 5. When they complain about food. "I don't know what to eat." "I just grab whatever's fast." "I'm so inconsistent with meals." These are buying signals. Respond with a solution, not just advice.

The Upsell Script

Here is a conversation you can have during or after a training session. Adapt it to your natural speaking style.

The Setup (1 minute):

> YOU
>
> "Hey [Name], I want to talk to you about something I've been thinking about. You've been doing great in our sessions — your [specific metric] has improved significantly. But I think we're leaving results on the table because we haven't addressed the nutrition side. Can I share something with you?"

The Problem (2 minutes):

> YOU
>
> "Right now, you're training [X] times a week and putting in serious effort. But your body can only adapt if it has the right fuel. Think of it this way: if training is the signal telling your body to change, nutrition is the raw material your body needs to actually make that change. Without the nutrition piece, you're sending the signal but not giving your body what it needs to respond."

The Solution (2 minutes):

> YOU

Section 4: Attracting Nutrition-Only Clients

A Different Audience, A Different Approach

Nutrition-only clients are people who want meal planning and nutrition guidance but do not necessarily want personal training. They might be:

- ☐ People who already exercise on their own (home workouts, running, CrossFit, yoga) but don't know how to eat for their goals
- ☐ People who can't afford personal training but can afford a meal plan service
- ☐ People in a different geographic location (online nutrition has no physical boundary)
- ☐ People who have been referred by a training client's friend
- ☐ Busy professionals who want someone else to figure out what to eat

This audience is larger than the personal training market, and they are underserved. Most nutrition coaching is either very clinical (registered dietitian) or very generic (app-based). There is a massive gap for trainers who understand fitness and can provide practical, goal-oriented meal plans.

Where to Find Nutrition-Only Clients

Channel 1: Referrals from Training Clients

Your training clients know people who need nutrition help. Ask specifically:

> YOU
> "Hey [Name], I've started offering nutrition-only services — meal plans and monthly check-ins for people who aren't training with me but want help with their eating. Do you know anyone who's been struggling with that? I'm looking for 5 people to work with this month."

Make it easy: draft a text they can forward.

Channel 2: Social Media — Education-First Content

Nutrition content performs exceptionally well on social media because everyone eats and everyone has food questions. Post content that demonstrates your expertise:

- ☐ "What I'd eat if I wanted to lose 10kg" — a day-of-eating post with macros and reasoning
- ☐ "Meal prep Sunday" — show a real meal prep with portions and nutritional breakdown
- ☐ "3 meals that look complicated but take 15 minutes" — recipe posts with photos
- ☐ "The most common nutrition mistake I see in my clients" — education posts that position you as an expert
- ☐ "Macro myth-busting" — short posts correcting common misconceptions

End every post with a call to action: "I build customized meal plans for people who want to stop guessing. DM me 'PLAN' if you want to see what a week would look like for your goals."

Channel 3: Local Business Partnerships

Partner with businesses whose customers overlap with your target market:

Section 5: Your First 10 Clients Action Plan

Week 1: Foundation

Day 1-2: Set Up Your Offering

- [ ] Choose your nutrition service model (refer to Section 2)
- [ ] Set your pricing (refer to the Meal Plan Pricing & Packaging Guide)
- [ ] Name your service
- [ ] Set up your EvoFit Meals account and practice creating 2-3 sample plans
- [ ] Prepare your dietary questionnaire (see Nutrition Client Onboarding Pack)

Day 3-4: Prepare Your Materials

- [ ] Write your group email announcement (adapt the template from Section 3)
- [ ] Create your social media content plan for the next 30 days (3 posts per week)
- [ ] Draft your referral request message
- [ ] Build 2 sample meal plans you can show prospects

Day 5-7: Launch to Existing Clients

- [ ] Send the group announcement to all training clients
- [ ] Have individual upsell conversations with your top 5 training clients (the ones most likely to say yes)
- [ ] Post your first nutrition-related social media content
- [ ] Ask 3 training clients for referrals

Week 2: Outreach

Day 8-10: Follow Up and Expand

- [ ] Follow up with training clients who opened your email but didn't respond
- [ ] Send the referral request to all remaining training clients
- [ ] Contact 3 local businesses about partnership referrals
- [ ] Post 3 more pieces of nutrition content on social media

Day 11-14: Convert Leads

- [ ] Run nutrition consultations with anyone who expressed interest
- [ ] Build and deliver your first meal plans through EvoFit Meals
- [ ] Follow up with all consultation no-shows and "let me think about it" responses
- [ ] Request testimonials from any clients who started their plans

Week 3: Accelerate

Section 6: Objection Handling

The 7 Most Common Objections and How to Respond

Objection 1: "I can find meal plans for free online."

> YOU
> "You absolutely can — and most of my clients tried that before coming to me. The difference is that a generic plan doesn't account for your specific goals, your food preferences, your schedule, or how your nutrition needs to sync with your training. What I build is customized to you and adjusted based on your progress. Free plans give you information. What I offer is implementation."

Objection 2: "I already know what to eat, I just don't do it."

> YOU
> "That's actually the most common thing I hear. And it tells me the issue isn't knowledge — it's structure and accountability. That's exactly what a customized plan provides. When someone hands you a specific plan with specific meals, portions, and a shopping list, the decision fatigue disappears. You don't have to figure out what to eat — it's already figured out. Most clients tell me that's the biggest shift."

Objection 3: "I don't want to eat boring/restrictive food."

> YOU
> "Neither do I — and that's not what this is. Your plan will be built around foods you actually enjoy. I'll ask you about your preferences, your dislikes, and any restrictions before I build anything. If you hate broccoli, broccoli won't be in your plan. The whole point is to create something you'll actually follow."

Objection 4: "That's expensive on top of training."

> YOU
> "I understand. Here's how I think about it: you're investing [X] per month in training. If your nutrition isn't supporting that training, you're getting 50-60% of the results you could be getting. The meal plan add-on closes that gap. It's not an additional cost — it's the thing that makes your training investment actually pay off."

Objection 5: "I'll just do it myself."

> YOU
> "I respect that. If you want, I can give you some general guidelines to start with. But here's what I've seen: building a proper meal plan that accounts for your macros, your training schedule, your food preferences, and your calorie targets takes real time and expertise. Most people who try to do it themselves spend hours, get frustrated, and end up back at square one. The value of what I offer isn't just the plan — it's the hours you don't spend trying to figure it out yourself."

Objection 6: "I need to think about it."

> YOU
> "Of course. Can I ask — what's the main thing you want to think through? Is it the cost, the time

Section 7: Metrics That Matter

Track These Numbers Monthly

MetricHow to TrackTarget Nutrition conversations this monthTally in your pipeline tracker10+ Conversion rate (conversation to client)Clients won / total conversations40%+ Upsell rate (training clients adding nutrition)Nutrition add-ons / total training clients50%+ Average nutrition revenue per clientTotal nutrition revenue / nutrition clients$100+/month Client retention (month-over-month)Clients retained / clients at start of month85%+ Referrals from nutrition clientsCount of new leads from existing clients2+/month

The Health Check

Run this check on the 1st of every month:

- ☐ 1. How many nutrition clients do I have? ____
- ☐ 2. How much revenue did nutrition generate this month? $____
- ☐ 3. How many hours did I spend on nutrition work this month? ____
- ☐ 4. What's my effective hourly rate for nutrition? $____ (revenue / hours)
- ☐ 5. How many clients did I lose this month? ____
- ☐ 6. How many new nutrition clients did I gain? ____
- ☐ 7. What was my top client source this month? ____

If your effective hourly rate for nutrition work is below your training rate, you need to either raise prices, improve efficiency (EvoFit Meals helps significantly here), or reduce the time you spend per client.

Section 8: Gym/Studio Nutrition Partnership Kit

This section is for enterprise operators who want to establish B2B partnerships with gyms, studios, wellness centers, and other fitness facilities.

The Partnership Pitch Deck Outline

Build a 5-slide presentation for in-person pitches to gym owners and studio directors:

Slide 1: The Problem

- [ ] 67% of gym members cite "not seeing results" as the top cancellation reason
- [ ] Nutrition is the missing link between training effort and visible results
- [ ] Most gyms offer zero structured nutrition support

Slide 2: The Solution

- [ ] White-label nutrition coaching program embedded in their facility
- [ ] Every trainer can offer customized meal plans through EvoFit Meals
- [ ] Professional-grade service delivery with minimal overhead

Slide 3: The Revenue Model

- [ ] Revenue share structure: gym keeps [X]%, trainer earns [X]%, platform fee is [X]%
- [ ] Projected revenue at 20%, 30%, and 40% member adoption
- [ ] Break-even timeline: typically 30-45 days

Slide 4: Member Impact

- [ ] 40-60% improvement in member retention when nutrition is integrated
- [ ] Higher NPS scores from members receiving comprehensive coaching
- [ ] Natural upsell path from nutrition-only to training + nutrition bundles

Slide 5: Implementation

- [ ] 2-week launch timeline from agreement to first client plan
- [ ] Staff training included (60-minute session for all coaches)
- [ ] Ongoing support: monthly performance reviews, quarterly strategy sessions
- [ ] Zero upfront cost — compensated through revenue share

Partnership Agreement Key Terms

Include these provisions in every partnership agreement:

TermRecommendation Revenue share60/40 (gym/you) or 50/30/20 (gym/trainer/you) ExclusivityNon-exclusive unless they guarantee minimum monthly volume Minimum commitment6 months (enough time to build a client base) BrandingCo-branded materials (their logo + your service name) Client ownershipNutrition clients belong to the gym —

Section 9: Corporate Wellness Pitch Deck Outline

For enterprise operators pursuing corporate wellness contracts. These are high-value deals — a single corporate contract can represent 50-200 nutrition clients.

Understanding the Corporate Buyer

Corporate wellness buyers care about three things:

- ☐ 1. Employee engagement — Will employees actually use the program?
- ☐ 2. Measurable outcomes — Can you prove it reduced healthcare costs or improved productivity?
- ☐ 3. Administrative simplicity — How much work is this for HR?

Your pitch must address all three.

The Pitch Deck (7 slides)

Slide 1: The Business Case

- ☐ Companies with nutrition wellness programs see 15-25% lower healthcare costs related to lifestyle diseases
- ☐ 72% of employees say they would participate in employer-sponsored nutrition programs
- ☐ ROI: $3-6 return for every $1 invested in employee wellness (industry benchmark)

Slide 2: The Program

- ☐ Three tiers of service: self-service, coached, and premium
- ☐ Tier 1 (Self-Service): Access to meal plan library tailored to common goals — $15 PEPM
- ☐ Tier 2 (Coached): Personalized meal plans with monthly check-ins — $75 PEPM
- ☐ Tier 3 (Premium): Weekly coaching, VIP support, executive nutrition — $200 PEPM

Slide 3: Employee Experience

- ☐ Simple onboarding: dietary questionnaire completed in 10 minutes
- ☐ Plans delivered digitally through the platform
- ☐ Accommodates every dietary restriction and preference
- ☐ Family-friendly plans (employee's household benefits too)

Slide 4: Administration

- ☐ Single point of contact for HR
- ☐ Quarterly utilization reports
- ☐ Employee satisfaction surveys included
- ☐ HIPAA-compliant data handling

Slide 5: Implementation Timeline

Section 10: Webinar Funnel Framework

A webinar funnel is the highest-converting acquisition channel for nutrition coaching at scale. It works for both B2C (individual clients) and B2B (corporate and partnership prospects).

The Webinar Structure (45 minutes)

Title: "Why Your Diet Keeps Failing — And the 3-Step System That Actually Works"

Minutes 0-5: The Hook

Open with a surprising statistic: "95% of people who start a diet will quit within 90 days. Not because they lack willpower — because the approach is fundamentally broken."

Minutes 5-15: The Problem (Education)

Explain why generic meal plans fail:

- [ ] They ignore individual preferences and schedules
- [ ] They require perfect conditions that never exist
- [ ] They have no feedback loop — when something isn't working, there's no one to adjust

Minutes 15-30: The Framework (Value Delivery)

Teach your 3-step system:

- [ ] 1. Personalization — How to calculate your specific calorie and macro targets
- [ ] 2. Flexibility — Why a plan must accommodate real life, not replace it
- [ ] 3. Accountability — Why coaching outperforms willpower by 3x

Deliver genuine value here. Attendees should walk away with actionable knowledge even if they never buy.

Minutes 30-40: The Offer

Present your nutrition coaching service as the done-for-you version of what you just taught:

- [ ] "I just taught you the framework. For most people, the challenge isn't understanding it — it's implementing it consistently. That's exactly what my coaching does."
- [ ] Present pricing, packages, and a webinar-exclusive incentive (first month at X% off, bonus meal plan, etc.)

Minutes 40-45: Q&A and Close

Answer questions live. Every question is an objection you can handle publicly — which sells to everyone else watching.

Webinar Promotion Plan

ChannelActionTimeline Email list3-email sequence: announcement, reminder, last chance10 days before Social mediaDaily posts for 7 days with registration link7 days before Training clientsPersonal invitation at sessions2 weeks before Partner businessesAsk them to share with their audience10 days before Paid ads (if budget)Facebook/Instagram ads targeting fitness interests in your area10 days before

Section 11: Paid Ads Playbook for Nutrition Services

Use paid advertising when your organic channels are producing consistent results and you want to accelerate growth. Do not start with paid ads — start with warm outreach, referrals, and content. Paid ads amplify what's already working.

Platform Selection

PlatformBest ForBudget Facebook/Instagram AdsLocal client acquisition, webinar registration$500-2,000/month Google Search AdsCapturing intent ("meal plan near me", "nutrition coach [city]")$500-1,500/month YouTube AdsBrand building, webinar promotion$300-1,000/month LinkedIn AdsCorporate wellness prospects$1,000-3,000/month

Ad Creative Framework

The Hook (first 3 seconds): Interrupt the scroll with a bold claim or question.

- [ ] "Still guessing what to eat? That's why your training isn't working."
- [ ] "What if your meal plan was built by someone who actually knows your goals?"
- [ ] "I built this client's entire week of meals in 15 minutes. Here's what it looks like."

The Body (15-30 seconds): Deliver value or proof.

- [ ] Show a visual of a meal plan with real meals
- [ ] Share a client transformation quote
- [ ] Demonstrate the app or platform briefly

The CTA: Drive to a specific action.

- [ ] "DM me 'PLAN' for a free 3-day sample"
- [ ] "Register for our free masterclass"
- [ ] "Book a free consultation — link in bio"

Budget Allocation

For a $1,500/month ad budget:

- [ ] 50% on Facebook/Instagram lead generation ads
- [ ] 30% on Google Search ads for high-intent keywords
- [ ] 20% on retargeting ads to website visitors and webinar registrants

Key Metrics to Track

Section 12: Multi-Location Acquisition Strategy

For enterprise operators running nutrition programs across 3+ locations. The challenge at multi-location scale is not generating leads — it is generating them consistently across every location and ensuring each facility converts at a competitive rate.

Centralized vs. Decentralized Acquisition

ApproachWhen to UseHow It Works CentralizedBrand-level campaigns, corporate contracts, webinar funnelsMarketing team generates leads centrally, distributes to locations based on geography DecentralizedLocal partnerships, community events, in-gym upsellsEach location manager runs their own outreach with shared templates and scripts Hybrid (recommended)Most enterprise operationsCentral team handles paid ads, webinars, and corporate outreach. Location managers handle local partnerships, in-gym upsells, and community events.

Location Performance Benchmarking

Compare acquisition metrics across locations monthly:

MetricLocation ALocation BLocation CSystem Avg New nutrition clients this month_____ Upsell rate (training to nutrition)___%___%___%___% Nutrition adoption rate (all members)___%___%___%___% Top acquisition channel_____ Cost per acquisition$___$___$___$___ Action framework: The bottom-performing location each month receives a targeted intervention from the program director — whether that is additional staff training, a local marketing push, or a leadership conversation about why nutrition is being deprioritized.

Multi-Location Launch Playbook

When launching nutrition services at a new location:

Week 1: Infrastructure

- [ ] Set up EvoFit Meals profiles for all coaches at the new location
- [ ] Train coaching staff (60-minute session using the staff training script from the Sales Scripts guide)
- [ ] Create 5 sample meal plans that represent the location's typical member demographics

Week 2: Soft Launch

- [ ] Each coach identifies their 5 most engaged training clients and has the upsell conversation
- [ ] Location manager sends the group announcement email to all members
- [ ] Post 3 pieces of nutrition content on the location's social media

Week 3: Full Launch

- [ ] Host an in-gym nutrition workshop (free, open to all members)
- [ ] Launch the "founding member" offer — 10 spots at a discounted rate

Section 13: B2B Nutrition Consulting Sales Process

For enterprise operators selling nutrition coaching as a service to other businesses — not just gyms, but any organization that wants to offer nutrition support to their people.

B2B Prospect Categories

The B2B Sales Process (6 Steps)

Step 1: Prospect Identification (Week 1)

Build a list of 50 target organizations. Use LinkedIn, local business directories, and industry associations. Prioritize organizations that already have wellness programs — they have budget allocated.

Step 2: Initial Outreach (Weeks 1-2)

Send personalized outreach to the decision maker. Reference something specific about their organization.

>
> "Hi [Name], I noticed [Company/Gym/School] recently [opened a new wellness center / launched an employee wellness initiative / hired a new athletic director]. I specialize in implementing nutrition coaching programs for organizations like yours — personalized meal plans that measurably improve [health outcomes / athletic performance / member retention]. Would a 15-minute conversation be worth your time?"

Step 3: Discovery Call (Week 2-3)

Ask: What are your current wellness offerings? Where are the gaps? What outcomes matter most? What budget exists? Who else needs to approve this?

Step 4: Custom Proposal (Week 3-4)

Build a proposal tailored to their answers. Include: program description, implementation timeline, pricing (with volume options), expected outcomes, and your qualifications.

Step 5: Pilot Program (Month 2)

Offer a 30-day pilot with 10-20 participants. Set clear success metrics before starting.

Step 6: Full Contract (Month 3)

Present pilot results. Propose full-program pricing with a 6-12 month commitment.

Quick Reference: The Revenue Ladder

Here is what your nutrition revenue looks like as you grow:

ClientsModelMonthly RevenueAnnual Revenue 5Meal plan only ($75/mo)$375$4,500 10Meal plan + check-in ($125/mo)$1,250$15,000 15Mix of models ($125 avg)$1,875$22,500 20Mix of models ($150 avg)$3,000$36,000 30Mix of models ($150 avg)$4,500$54,000 50Team-delivered ($150 avg)$7,500$90,000 100Multi-location ($150 avg)$15,000$180,000

At 100 clients across multiple locations averaging $150/month, nutrition generates $180,000/year in revenue. With 70% gross margins, that is $126,000 in gross profit — a standalone business built entirely on top of your existing fitness operation.

The path from 0 to 100 nutrition clients takes most enterprise operations 6-12 months of consistent effort. The systems in this playbook are designed to get you there.
