Win-Back Scripts and Re-engagement Sequences for Clients Who Stopped Following Plans

Why This Kit Exists

You will lose nutrition clients. Some will stop following their plans. Some will cancel. Some will simply go quiet and stop responding to messages. This is normal. The question isn't whether it will happen — it's whether you have a system for bringing them back.

The economics are clear: acquiring a new nutrition client costs 5-7x more than retaining an existing one. A client who returns after a 2-month gap is already onboarded, already trusts you, and already knows how your service works. Re-engagement is the highest-ROI activity in your business.

This kit gives you 15 re-engagement and retention tools: win-back scripts for the most common departure scenarios, plateau intervention protocols, a quarterly review system, a seasonal rotation playbook, client milestone templates, and anniversary re-engagement sequences.

The 5 Core Re-engagement Scripts

Script 1: The Dormant Client

Scenario: The client hasn't cancelled, but they've stopped responding to messages, missed their last check-in, and you suspect they're not following the plan. It's been 2-3 weeks of silence. Timing: Send at the 2-week mark of no engagement. Don't wait longer — the further they drift, the harder the return. Message (text or email):

Hi [Name],

>

I noticed we haven't connected in a couple of weeks and I wanted to reach out. No judgment, no pressure — life gets busy and I know nutrition isn't always the top priority when things pile up.

>

I just want you to know two things:

1. Your plan is still active and I can update it anytime you're ready to pick things back up.

2. If something about the plan wasn't working — the recipes were too complicated, the portions didn't feel right, the timing didn't fit your schedule — I'd genuinely love to hear that. That's exactly the kind of feedback that lets me make the plan better for you.

>

No need for a long reply. Even a thumbs up to let me know you're good would be great. And if now isn't the right time, that's okay too — I'll be here when you're ready.

If they respond with an excuse (busy, stressed, fell off track):

Plateau Intervention Protocols

Protocol 1: Caloric Cycling

When to use: Client has been in a consistent calorie deficit for 6+ weeks, results have stalled, and adherence is still strong (Score 4-5). Their metabolism has adapted to the current calorie level. How it works: Instead of eating the same calories every day, alternate between higher-calorie days and lower-calorie days. The weekly average stays the same, but the variation prevents metabolic adaptation and provides psychological relief. Implementation: Day TypeCalorie AdjustmentWhen High DayMaintenance calories (+300-500 above deficit)Training days (2-3 per week) Low DayStandard deficit caloriesRest days or light activity days Normal DayCurrent plan caloriesRemaining days Example for a client on 1,800 cal/day deficit:

- ☐ 3 Training Days: 2,100 cal (high)
- ☐ 2 Rest Days: 1,600 cal (low)
- ☐ 2 Normal Days: 1,800 cal (standard)
- ☐ Weekly average: ~1,843 cal (essentially the same as eating 1,800 every day)

Script for explaining to client:

> YOU
> "Your body has gotten really efficient at running on [current calories]. That's actually a sign that your metabolism is working — but it means we need to shake things up. Instead of eating the same amount every day, I'm going to vary your calories through the week. On training days, you'll eat more to fuel your workouts. On rest days, you'll eat less because your body needs less. The weekly total stays roughly the same, but your body can't adapt as easily to the variation. Plus, the higher-calorie training days will feel like a break, which helps mentally."

Protocol 2: Refeed Strategy

When to use: Client has been in a calorie deficit for 8+ weeks, is experiencing fatigue, reduced training performance, mood changes, or persistent hunger. The deficit has been aggressive (>500 cal/day below maintenance). How it works: One or two days per week, calories are raised to maintenance or slightly above, primarily through increased carbohydrates. This temporarily restores glycogen, boosts leptin (the satiety hormone), and provides a mental reset. Implementation: Refeed ParameterGuideline Frequency1x per week for moderate deficits, 2x per week for aggressive deficits or very lean clients DurationFull day (all meals elevated) Calorie targetMaintenance level or TDEE Macro priorityIncrease carbohydrates primarily. Keep protein the same. Reduce fat slightly to accommodate the carb increase. Best timingThe day before or the day of the most demanding training session Script for explaining to client:

> YOU
> "I'm adding a refeed day to your plan. Once a week — [day] — you're going to eat at your maintenance

Quarterly Nutrition Review System

Why Quarterly Reviews Matter

Monthly check-ins manage the week-to-week. Quarterly reviews manage the arc. They're where you zoom out, assess the big picture, and make strategic decisions about the client's nutrition direction for the next 90 days. Without them, coaching becomes reactive instead of proactive.

The Quarterly Review Framework (30-45 minutes)

Part 1: Data Review (10 minutes)

Pull the following data before the meeting:

MetricQ StartQ EndChange Weight Body measurements (waist, chest, hips) Average weekly adherence score Average daily protein intake Number of plan adjustments made Client satisfaction (self-reported 1-10)

Present this to the client at the start of the review:

> YOU
>
> "Here's your quarter in numbers. Let me walk you through what I'm seeing, and then I want to hear your take."

Part 2: Client Reflection (10 minutes)

Ask these five questions. Let them talk.

- ☐ 1. "What's the biggest change you've noticed in the last 3 months — not just physical, but how you feel, how you think about food, how your relationship with nutrition has shifted?"
- ☐ 2. "What was the hardest part of this quarter?"
- ☐ 3. "What meal or recipe was your absolute favorite?"
- ☐ 4. "Is there anything about the service that isn't working for you that you haven't mentioned yet?"
- ☐ 5. "Where do you want to be 3 months from now?"

Part 3: Strategic Planning (10 minutes)

Based on the data and the client's reflection, set the direction for the next quarter:

"For the next 90 days, here's what I recommend:

- Goal: [New goal or continuation of current goal]

- Macro adjustment: [Increase/decrease/maintain current targets]

- Plan structure change: [More variety / simplified / performance-focused / seasonal shift]

Seasonal Menu Rotation Playbook

Why Rotate Menus Seasonally

Clients who eat the same meals for months get bored. Bored clients quit. But there's a deeper reason: seasonal eating improves adherence, reduces grocery costs (seasonal produce is cheaper), and adds natural variety that keeps the plan feeling fresh without requiring the client to learn entirely new recipes.

The Rotation Schedule

SeasonMenu FocusKey IngredientsRecipe Style Winter (Dec-Feb)Warm, hearty, comfort foodRoot vegetables, squash, stews, soups, citrus, dark leafy greensSlow cooker meals, one-pot dishes, warm breakfasts (oatmeal, eggs), hearty salads with roasted vegetables Spring (Mar-May)Fresh, light, transitionalAsparagus, peas, strawberries, leafy greens, herbs, new potatoesFresh salads, grilled proteins, lighter dinners, smoothies, grain bowls Summer (Jun-Aug)No-cook/minimal-cook, grillingTomatoes, berries, corn, zucchini, stone fruit, watermelon, cucumbersGrilled everything, cold salads, wraps, no-cook meal prep, smoothie bowls, fresh salsas Autumn (Sep-Nov)Harvest flavors, meal prep-friendlyApples, squash, sweet potatoes, Brussels sprouts, pumpkin, pearsSheet-pan dinners, roasted vegetables, warm grain bowls, soups and chilis, baked proteins

How to Implement the Rotation

4 weeks before the season changes:

- [ ] 1. Review your client roster. Note each client's current plan and preferences.
- [ ] 2. Identify 5-8 new seasonal recipes from EvoFit Meals that match each client's macro targets and dietary restrictions.
- [ ] 3. Replace 30-40% of the current plan's recipes with seasonal alternatives. Keep 60-70% of their favorites.

At the season change:

Send a proactive message:

> YOU
>
> "Hey [Name], I've refreshed your plan for [season]. I swapped in some new recipes that use seasonal ingredients — fresher, cheaper at the store, and honestly more exciting than what we've been running. Check out [specific new recipe] — I think you're going to love it. Everything else stays the same in terms of your macros and structure. Enjoy!"

Why 30-40% rotation? Too little change (10-20%) and the client doesn't notice — it doesn't solve boredom. Too much change (50%+) and they feel overwhelmed by an entirely new plan. The sweet spot is enough freshness to feel exciting without losing the comfort of familiar meals.

Client Milestone Celebration Templates

Why Milestones Matter

Acknowledging milestones reinforces positive behavior, strengthens the coaching relationship, and creates moments that clients remember and share. Most trainers only celebrate the big things (goal weight reached, 12-week transformation complete). The best coaches celebrate the small wins too — because small wins are what keep clients going between the big ones.

Milestone Categories and Templates

Milestone 1: First Full Week Completed

> YOU
> "[Name], you just completed your first full week on the plan. I know that doesn't sound like a huge deal, but here's what it actually means: you changed your grocery list, you cooked new recipes, you followed a new routine, and you showed up for it every day. That's harder than people think, and you did it. Week 2 is going to feel easier. Let's go."

Milestone 2: First Month Completed

> YOU
> "One month in, [Name]. Let me tell you what I've noticed: [specific positive change — better adherence, improved protein consistency, lost weight, better energy]. The first month is always the hardest because everything is new. Now the habits are forming. The foundation is set. Month 2 is where momentum builds."

Milestone 3: First Progress Milestone Hit (5 lbs lost, 10% adherence improvement, etc.)

> YOU
> "[Name] — [specific milestone]. Let that sink in. When you started, [starting state]. Now, [current state]. This isn't luck. This is what happens when you follow a structured plan and commit to the process. I'm proud of you. What's the next target we're going after?"

Milestone 4: 90 Days Completed

> YOU
> "90 days. You've officially beaten the drop-off curve — you're in the top 20% of people who start a meal plan and actually follow through for 3 months. Here's your 90-day report: [include data]. The habits you've built in these 90 days are yours to keep. Whether we continue working together or you fly solo, you've leveled up permanently."

Milestone 5: 6-Month Anniversary

> YOU
> "[Name], it's been 6 months. Half a year of structured nutrition. Here's what blows my mind: when you started, [specific early struggle]. Now, [how they've grown]. You're not the same person nutritionally — and your body shows it. Six months of consistency is rare. You should be genuinely proud."

Anniversary Re-engagement Sequences

For Clients Who Left — Timed to Their Original Start Date

When a client cancels, log their cancellation date and their original start date. Use the anniversary of their start date as a natural re-engagement moment.

6-Month Anniversary of Original Start Date (if cancelled 2-4 months ago):

Hi [Name],

>

I was looking through my calendar and realized it's been 6 months since you started your nutrition coaching with me. Even though we're not working together right now, I wanted to check in.

>

How's the nutrition side going? Are you still using some of the habits and recipes from your plan?

>

If you've been thinking about getting back into structured eating, your preferences and restrictions are all saved in EvoFit Meals. I can have a fresh plan ready within 24 hours — no re-onboarding needed.

>

No pressure either way. Just wanted to say hi and see how you're doing.

>

[Your Name]

1-Year Anniversary of Original Start Date (if cancelled 4+ months ago):

Hi [Name],

>

Client Exit Survey Template

Send this within 24 hours of a client cancelling. Keep it short — they're leaving, not signing up for homework. Subject: Quick question before you go (takes 2 minutes)

Hi [Name],

I respect your decision and I've processed your cancellation. Before we wrap up, would you mind answering a few quick questions? Your feedback genuinely helps me improve the service for future clients.

1. What was the primary reason you decided to stop the nutrition service?

- ☐ Budget / cost
- ☐ Not seeing results
- ☐ Plan didn't fit my lifestyle
- ☐ Didn't have time to follow the plan
- ☐ Found another solution
- ☐ No longer a priority for me
- ☐ Other: _____

2. What did you like most about the service?

_____

3. What would have made you stay?

_____

4. On a scale of 1-10, how likely would you be to return in the future?

1 (not likely) ---- 5 (maybe) ---- 10 (very likely)

5. Would you recommend this service to a friend?

- ☐ Yes
- ☐ No
- ☐ Maybe

6. Anything else you want to share?

_____

Thanks for your time, and I genuinely wish you well. If you ever want to pick things up again, your profile and preferences are saved — just say the word.

Plan Adjustment Trigger Checklist

Don't wait for clients to complain. Use this checklist at every check-in to catch issues before they become cancellation reasons.

Check These at Every Monthly Review

Adherence Signals:

- ☐ Client followed the plan 80%+ of the time this month

- If NO: Ask what got in the way. Adjust plan complexity, meal count, or prep time.

- ☐ Client completed their meal prep most weeks

- If NO: Simplify the prep. Offer no-cook alternatives for some meals.

- ☐ Client is eating the meals they're supposed to (not consistently skipping or substituting)

- If NO: Check which meals are being skipped. Swap them for something they prefer.

Result Signals:

- ☐ Client is making measurable progress toward their goal

- If NO: Recalculate macros. Check if activity level has changed. Review adherence honestly.

- ☐ Client's weight trend is moving in the intended direction (or stable if maintaining)

- If NO: Verify calorie targets. Check for untracked food intake. Consider a diet break if they've been in a deficit for 12+ weeks.

- ☐ Client reports acceptable energy levels and mood

- If NO: Check if calories are too low. Review carb intake around training. Check sleep.

Satisfaction Signals:

- ☐ Client enjoys at least 70% of the recipes in their plan

- If NO: Review food preference survey. Add more variety from their preferred cuisines.

- ☐ Client feels the plan is manageable within their schedule

- If NO: Reduce cooking time per recipe. Cut the plan to fewer meals with more repeats.

- ☐ Client is engaged in check-ins (asking questions, providing feedback)

- If NO: Red flag for disengagement. Initiate a casual check-in outside the scheduled time.

Life Change Signals:

- ☐ Has the client's schedule changed (new job, new routine, travel)?

- If YES: Rebuild the plan around the new schedule immediately. Don't wait for them to ask.

- ☐ Has the client's training changed (new program, reduced frequency, injury)?

- If YES: Recalculate calorie and macro targets. Adjust meal timing.

- ☐ Has the client mentioned financial stress, relationship stress, or major life events?

- If YES: Check in more frequently. Simplify the plan. Reduce pressure.

The 90-Day Re-engagement Sequence

For clients who have cancelled, set up this automated (or manual) touchpoint sequence:

Day After CancellationActionMessage Focus Day 1Exit surveyCollect feedback Day 30Check-in message"How's it going? Miss anything about structured eating?" Day 60Value-addSend a free seasonal recipe pack or nutrition tip relevant to their goal Day 90Re-engagement offer"I have a spot opening up — interested in a fresh start at a returning client rate?" Day 180Long-game touch"Hey [Name], just thinking of you. How are things going?" Day 365Anniversary re-engagement"It's been a year since we started. The door is always open." The 90-day message (template):

> Hi [Name],
>
> It's been a few months and I wanted to reach out. I have a spot opening up in my nutrition coaching and I immediately thought of you.
>
> If you've been thinking about getting back on track, I'd love to work together again. For returning clients, I waive the setup process — your preferences and restrictions are all saved, and I can have a fresh plan ready within 24 hours.
>
> If now isn't the right time, no worries at all. But if it is — just reply and we'll get things moving.
> [Your Name]

Expected return rate: 15-25% of cancelled clients will re-engage within 6 months if you maintain the touchpoint sequence. That's significant — it means for every 10 clients you lose, you can expect 1-3 to return without any acquisition cost. *This guide is part of the EvoFit Meals Business Vault.
