1 THE SCIENCE

Why Meal Prep Works

Meal prep isn't just about convenience — it's the single highest-leverage habit for nutrition compliance. Here's what the data shows.

3x
More Likely to Hit Macros

7 → 2
Hours Per Week Cooking Reduced

$75+
Saved Per Week on Food Costs

📈 Compliance Is Everything

Clients who meal prep consistently are 3x more likely to hit their daily macros. The reason? When meals are ready to grab, willpower is removed from the equation. No decisions, no excuses, no fast food drive-throughs.

⏰ Time Savings

The average person spends 7 hours per week cooking daily meals. Meal prep compresses this into a single 2-hour session on Sunday. That's 5 hours back every week — 260 hours per year.

💰 Money Savings

Buying in bulk and cooking at scale saves $50–$100 per week compared to eating out or ordering delivery. Over a year, that's $2,600–$5,200 back in your pocket.

The Bottom Line

Meal prep removes the #1 barrier to nutrition success: daily decision fatigue. When your meals are ready, your results become inevitable.

2 THE SYSTEM

The 2-Hour Timeline

Follow this exact minute-by-minute schedule. Every step is designed to run in parallel so nothing sits idle.

Minutes 0 – 15

Start Grains + Marinate Proteins

Put rice and/or quinoa in the rice cooker. Season chicken breasts and place in marinade. Start boiling water for eggs. These run passively while you work on the next steps.

Minutes 15 – 30

Prep All Vegetables

Wash, chop, and portion all vegetables for the week. Spread on sheet pans with olive oil and seasoning. Slide into the oven at 400°F. Prep overnight oats base in jars.

Minutes 30 – 60

Cook All Proteins

Cook marinated chicken on the stovetop or grill. Bake any other proteins (fish, turkey). Remove eggs from boiling water and ice bath. Slice and portion all proteins once cooked.

Minutes 60 – 90

Assemble Containers

Build each meal: protein + grain + vegetables. Add different sauces and seasonings to each container to create variety. Prepare overnight oats with toppings in separate jars.

Minutes 90 – 120

Cool, Label + Store

Let containers cool to room temperature (10–15 minutes). Label each with the meal name and day. Stack fridge meals (Days 1–3) on top shelf. Freeze remaining meals (Days 4–7) in freezer bags.

💡 Pro Tip: Batch Your Tasks

The secret is parallel processing. While grains cook passively, you're chopping vegetables. While proteins sear, you're assembling containers. Never stand idle.

💡 Why Glass Over Plastic?

Glass containers don't absorb odors, stain, or leach chemicals when heated. They last years instead of months. The upfront cost is higher but the long-term value is unbeatable — plus your food actually tastes better reheated in glass.

⚠️ Safety Tips

Cool Before Storing
Let food cool to room temperature (max 30 min) before sealing containers. Hot food in sealed containers creates moisture and bacteria.

Thaw Safely
Move frozen meals to the fridge the night before. Never thaw on the counter. Microwave defrost works in a pinch.

The Smell Test Isn't Enough
When in doubt, throw it out. Stick to the fridge life guidelines above. Label every container with the prep date.

Fridge Organization
Days 1–3 on the top shelf (eat first). Days 4–7 go straight to the freezer. This prevents waste and ensures freshness.
